Risk Rating

Medium

High

The upgrade in Ghana’s long-term foreign currency issuer default rating, the uptick in bond market activity, and improved access to liquidity have reduced the Fund’s overall risk from high to medium.

Distribution

SIFT does not distribute earnings. All earnings are reinvested in the Fund, which impacts the net asset value of the Fund. Investors seeking to withdraw earnings will have to sell part of their units to realize their earnings.

Fund Review and Strategy

At the end of the reporting period, the Fund's assets stood at approximately GHS 647 million, with GHS 409 million allocated to the main class and GHS 238 million to the sub-class. The Fund delivered a year-to-date return of 28.4% on the main class and 12.9% on the sub-class, against a benchmark return of 14.2%. The portfolio allocations at the end of August 2025 were 51% in Government bonds, 46% in money market instruments, and 3% in corporate bonds. The Fund's strategy moving forward is to shift from its current focus on investing in short-term securities to its primary mandate as a fixed income fund investing in medium-to long-term corporate and government bonds.

Market Overview

Despite August's treasury auction undersubscriptions, which underscores a shift in investor preferences, the relative stability in treasury bill yields suggests that the reprieve from short-term borrowing costs may have bottomed out. Should the government's re-entry into the local bond market offer attractive pricing, it may reignite investor participation, providing both a yield cushion against future rate volatility and a boost to market liquidity. We expect inflation to maintain its downward trajectory, albeit at a slower pace, supported by fiscal discipline, a tight monetary policy stance, relative currency stability, and broader macroeconomic improvements. However, uncertainties around possible tariff adjustments and renewed currency pressures remain key downside risks that could temper the pace of disinflation.
